

Early Intervention Provider Search

Service coordinators sometimes make dozens of phone calls to find the right early interventionist to work with a family. Service coordinators must document their search for providers in their case notes, but sometimes an early interventionist may return a service coordinator's call and they may not remember who they called them about if they have made dozens of phone calls for multiple families. This is a helpful tool to keep by the phone in (in a confidential place to protect each family's privacy) so that when that return call comes you can quickly reference who you called about.
